

Through My Eyes

Mike Dooley

"Block Island Wave"
June, 2015

I love the water. Put me near the coast and I could happily take photos all day long. I never get tired of the way the water moves along the beach, and was fascinated by this scene on Block Island. The waves chased me up and down the beach that morning.

"Sunrise at Black Point"
October, 2013

I loved this scene, so many things that I was looking for in a dramatic seascape all came together at once! The surf was really rough that morning, and I wanted to capture the power of the ocean, and timed the shot to get the spray as the waves crashed onto the rocks. A few fishermen provide a nice sense of scale, while the rays of light from the sun behind the clouds finished it off for me. A truly beautiful morning!

“The Landscape”

As a young man in my teens I remember spending countless days in the company of my grandfather. Wherever we were, he would often stop, and stare up at the sky, whistling to himself. After a few moments he would laugh and we would return to whatever errand we were on.

At the time I did not understand the simple joy that my grandfather could find in the skies. I did not yet see the beauty that could be found in observing the world around me.

As an adult, I find myself doing very much the same thing my grandfather did. I try to capture those moments and hold onto them with my camera.

"Trees at Sunset"
July, 2011

New England is full of so many beautiful scenes. Two trees, on top of a hill under a warm summer sky. I visit this location often, and have enjoyed watching it change over the years. Each photo that I create is different—it is not just the landscape that changes, but I change as well, and with each passing year my vision of the world around me changes.

"Docked Boats under Fall Colors"
October, 2013

Fall in Rhode Island provides an assortment of beautiful scenes to enjoy. Driving down Rte. 102 in Scituate one afternoon I caught this scene out of the corner of my eye, and had to pull a quick U-turn. The two small boats drew my attention, and the red of the canoe played nicely with the red leaves.

Mike Dooley is a fine art photographer specializing in seascape and landscape photography. Living in Warwick, Rhode Island he has hundreds of miles of coastline to explore.

Mike's landscapes and seascapes are recognizable by their bold colors, striking compositions and masterful displays of light. The hour before sunrise will often find Mike quietly sitting at the water's edge, camera at the ready waiting for dawn to arrive.

Mike takes great pleasure in applying his unique and creative vision to the variety of scenes that he finds in front of his camera, and sharing those moments with you in his photographs.

You can see more of Mike's work, as well as contact him through his website at: mikedooleyphotography.com

